Hypoxanthine phosphoribosyltransferase (HPRT) and adenine phosphoribosyltransferase (APRT) are separated by two genes, HPRT1 and HPRT2, on human chromosome 6p. In Chinese hamster V-79 cells, HPRT deficiency is associated with a complete loss of HPRT activity, while APRT deficiency is associated with about 80% loss of activity [Meister, I., Schulman, R. R., Loeb, J. & Ayers, J. (1988) Mol. Cell. Biol. 8, 2636-2642]. We have isolated cDNAs corresponding to a novel HPRT2 cDNA encoding Chinese hamster HPRT. The deduced protein sequence is identical to that of the HPRT2 cDNA encoding human HPRT and has an additional
